COMMODITY BUZZ

- U.S. oil prices eased in Asian trade on Tuesday after the International Energy Agency (IEA) forecast U.S. shale output to grow at about 1.4 million barrels per day by 2022. U.S. West Texas Intermediate crude (CLc1) slipped 4 cents to $53.16 a barrel as of 0042 GMT (7.42 p.m. ET) after settling down 13 cents in the previous session. Brent crude (LCOc1) had yet to start trading but closed the previous session up 11 cents at $56.01 a barrel. U.S. shale production would climb even if prices remain around $60 a barrel, the IEA said in its five-year "Oil 2017" market analysis released on Monday. A rise to $80 a barrel could see shale oil production grow by 3 million barrels per day by 2022, the IEA said.
- Gold prices edged higher in Asia on Tuesday with jobs data at the end of the week the lodestar for a widely expected Fed rate hike this month that will set the tone for the precious metal. Comex gold futures rose 0.09% to $1,226.55 a troy ounce, while silver futures for May delivery dipped 0.05% to $17.803 a troy ounce. Coppers futures were last quoted at $2.656 a pound. Overnight, gold prices were higher during North American morning hours on Monday, kicking the week off with gains as a missile launch by North Korea was the latest event to add to concerns about rising geopolitical tensions. Geopolitical tensions were in focus after North Korea fired four ballistic missiles early on Monday, three of which landed in Japan's exclusive economic zone, an area extending about 230 miles out to sea from its coastline.

SPECIAL NEWS

- China's plan to boost domestic manufacturing by 2025 is "highly problematic" and could be used to discriminate against foreign firms in favor of Chinese competitors, a top European business lobby said on Tuesday. Beijing's "Made in China 2025" plan calls for a dramatic increase in domestically-made products in 10 sectors - from robotics to biopharmaceuticals - that the government hopes will accelerate an industrial upgrade as economic growth slows. Foreign business groups, however, have grown more vociferous in criticizing Beijing's lackluster market reforms, and worry that the plan will force members to give up key technology in order to access the market or bypass them altogether. "Made in China 2025" amounts to a "large-scale import substitution plan aimed at nationalizing key industries" or "severely curtailing the position of foreign business", the European Union Chamber of Commerce in China said in a report.
- Chinese Finance Minister Xiao Jie said on Tuesday there was no problem with transparency in the state budget, when asked why no defence spending figure had been included in the annual budget report as had been the case in previous years. The finance ministry released the 2017 budget report on Sunday, and the omission of the closely watched defence spending projection sparked questions over transparency. The state news agency Xinhua, quoting an unidentified Finance Ministry official, reported on Monday that defence spending would rise this year by 7 percent to 1.044 trillion yuan ($151.21 billion). [nL3N1GJ24N] Xiao was speaking at a news conference during the annual session of the National People's Congress, or parliament, in Beijing.
